

"The Oprah Winfrey Show" aired comments regarding teenage sexual acts that I've only heard Chris Rock talk about in his HBO comedy specials. I have read this morning that Howard Stern was not allowed to replay the audio of the "The Oprah Winfrey Show". I thought the shows (Oprah's) content was abit over the top when I witnessed it, but the fact that Mr. Stern was not allowed to replay the audio reinforces my opinion. The content of the show was played off as educational, but the the manner of which the topics were delivered were more to entertain and titalize. This is my opinion, and my concern. Oprah didn't own this country last time I checked, and she should be subjected to the same law enforcement as everyone else, regardless of her popularity with the general public. Howard Stern seems to be pretty popular himself. This show ("The Oprah Winfrey Show") aired on Thursday, the 18th of March. It was broadcast on televison station WSAZ at 4pm eastern standard time. Thank you for your time.
